GSK Innovation

PURPOSE

This Award will acknowledge the successful use and application of innovation within a business or across a supply chain to achieve tangible business results with clear societal impact. The Award is open to any company working in or providing services to the chemical industry.

CRITERIA

The innovation activity can be in any area of a business related to the chemical industry; this can include, for example: innovative products, services, processes, facility design, workforce development, technology or operations.

The innovation should demonstrate its potential to make a significant contribution to the overall performance of the Chemical Industry - for example improved environmental footprint, cleaner, leaner technologies or creation of products with a positive societal impact .

Judges will look for:

1. Creativity—Does the innovation represent a new and creative approach to opportunities, problems or issues? Is it new, unique or significantly “out-of-the-box thinking”? Does it go above and beyond current approaches?
2. Effectiveness and Tangibility—What has the innovation tangibly achieved so far.? Are there demonstrated results (e.g. money saved, reduction in air pollution, energy saved, etc)? Can it be demonstrated how the innovation is more effective than currently available practices, ways of working or technologies.
3. Transferability and significance—Could the innovation or aspects of its learnings be transferred to others across the industry? Does the innovation address significant opportunities, issues or problems for a specific sector or across the industry as a whole?
